REGISTRATION TAKES 15 DAYS

War Department Plans to Enroll 7,000,000 Men in That Time.

WAITING FINAL ACTION

On President's Order Work Will Be Completed in Fifteen Days.

Washington, May 4.—Registration of approximately seven million men for military service will be completed within fifteen days after the War Department's machinery has been set in motion.

State election systems will do the work under supervision of the Federal government, the voting precincts being the units for initial recording of the men.

Registration cards have been distributed by the Census Bureau to Mayors of many cities and towns, and the most remote sections will be supplied before the registration day to be set by presidential proclamation after the army bill has been signed.

A period of fifteen days will intervene probably between the issue of the call and the opening of the registration. Five days will be allowed to complete registration, and within thirty days the completed roll will be in Washington.

Brig. Gen. E. H. Crowder, now Judge Advocate General of the army, has been selected to become Provost Marshal General in charge of the whole registration system. He will have the rank of Major General.

He signed seven bills, as follows: Fixing the state tax rate at forty cents and exempting tangible property from local taxes.

Taxing distilled spirits two cents per gallon and malt liquors ten cents a barrel.

Taxing oil production. Increasing the corporation tax from thirty to fifty cents on the thousand dollars.

Permitting a referendum on laws classifying property for taxes.

Fixing state rates on bank deposits at ten cents on the $100.

Mr. Koppers has a wife and little son, three and a half years of age, and they will come to Cadiz to reside as soon as he can make arrangements for a home. The fourteenth annual banquet and open session of the Athenaeum was held Thursday night, with covers laid for 96. The members and guests assembled about 8 o'clock in the parlors of Hotel Latham and descended to the dining room at 8:45, a little later than had been planned. The tables were arranged in three long rows running north and south, and the President was seated at the south end of the center table. The speakers were at ends of the three tables.

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. C. M. Thompson and the elaborate menu was served in three courses.

At ten o'clock the tables were cleared and the literary program lasted for two hours.

President A. H. Eckles, who presided, made a graceful toastmaster. His introductory remarks were replete with humor and were a fitting prelude to the round of eloquence and fun that followed.

Mr. McKenzie, the first speaker, in a ten-minute speech characterized by beauty of diction and depth of sentiment, was at his best as an eloquent and pleasing speaker. Mr. Smith, who followed him, also one of the city's gifted young orators, thoroughly pleased the audience with one of his literary masterpieces delivered in his most graceful style. Dr. Thompson was stirred into a jesting "scrap" with the toastmaster by the latter's introduction and his excellent speech was enlivened by several good anecdotes. The able divine was heard for the first time as an after-dinner speaker at the Athenaeum and displayed his versatility in a pleasing manner.

Judge Fowler was in fine fettle and had his catchy subject well in hand. Always one of the society's best speakers, he fairly excelled himself in the twenty minutes that he kept the audience in a good humor.

Mr. Meacham arose at 11:45, just as a rain storm came up, and referred to the fact that the last time he was on the program the roof of the house was torn off. He promised to moderate his remarks so as not to renew the old danger. He talked about wise men and told some jokes. The program

THE PRESIDENT STEPS IN

Asks Blanket Power to Regulate Production, Distribution and Prices.

Washington, May 4.—In a sweeping bill, introduced with administration approval by Chairman Lever, of the house agricultural committee, it is proposed to empower the president under the war clause of the constitution to take these measures whenever, in his opinion, the national emergency shall require:

To fix maximum and minimum prices, for food, clothing, fuel and other necessities and the articles required for their production.

To prescribe regulations to govern the production of these commodities and if necessary to requisition the producing factories, mines or other establishments.

To compel holders of necessities to release them in amounts insuring equitable distribution.

To regulate exchanges in such a way as to eliminate market manipulation.

To compel railroads to give preference to the movement of necessities.

To levy such important duties as he finds necessary to prevent excessive "dumping" of foreign products.

To impose limitations or prohibitions upon the use of grain in the manufacture of liquor.

In addition the secretary of agriculture would be empowered to establish standard food grades; to license and control the manufacture, storage and distribution of foods, to prescribe the percentage of flour to be milled from wheat, and to regulate the mixing of wheat flour with other flour in the making of bread and other food.

HEAVY ATTACK BEGINS.

Fourth Period of Intensive Fighting in Progress on Front Near Queant.

The British troops have reached Cherisy, crossed the Hindenberg line toward Reincourt, and reported to have taken Bullecourt, says Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters.

The official report from British headquarters in France tonight reads: "Fighting occurred throughout the day from west of Queant to north of Fresnoy, four miles east of the village of Vimy. The enemy brought up large reserves of men and guns and delivered repeated counter-attacks practically along the whole battle front."

"These hostile forces suffered heavily from our concentrated artillery and machine gun fire, both while assembling prior to the attack and during the actual assault."

"In the face of obstinate resistance our troops this morning penetrated a sector of the Hindenberg line west of Queant and have maintained themselves there all day against constant and powerful attacks."

"In addition to the enemy's severe losses in killed and wounded we captured several hundreds of German prisoners."

"Great activity continues in the air. Four German airplanes were brought down in the aerial fighting and another hostile machine was shot down in our lines. In addition our airplanes drove down five other enemy airplanes out of control and destroyed other German kite balloons. One of our machines is missing."

279 MEN LOST ON BRITISH BOAT

Sinking of Arcadian and Rockingham by Submarine Is Announced.

London, May 4.—The British transport Arcadian was sunk by a submarine April 15. It is believed 279 men were drowned.

"The Arcadian was torpedoed in the eastern Mediterranean. She went down five minutes afterward."

"Nineteen officers, ten men with naval ratings, thirty-four members of the crew and two civilians are among the missing, who, it is presumed, were drowned."

London, May 4.—Three men were drowned by the sinking of the American steamer Rockingham by a German submarine, so survivors who reached land today report. No word has yet been received of the boat containing the thirteen missing men. There were twelve naval gunners on board.

HIGH COST OF WAR.

Friedrich Nounann, a former member of the Reichstag, is reported from Amsterdam as having said in a lecture: "Until now the war has cost Germany a loss of 1,300,000 dead. This together with the decrease in birth, gives a reduction of 3,800,000. The surplus of females has increased from 800,000 to far more than 200,000. The nation has bled as never since the Thirty Years war."

Esq. Slaughter Dead.

The United States has decided to France and Italy. A loan to Russia will be made and Belgium's application is under consideration.

The American steamer Rockingham has been sunk by a German submarine. Thirteen of the men are missing. The Rockingham was a ship of forty-four hundred tons.

rant Keepers' Association of St. Louis

The meatless day will be Friday.

Seventy-five Norwegian vessels were sunk by German submarines in April, and more than 100 sailors lost their lives. If such a monthly loss was maintained Norway's merchant navy would be destroyed in a year and a half.

Editor Jas. M. Thompson, of New Orleans, has jumped on Ambassador Jas. W. Gerard, for roasting his father-in-law, Champ Clark in an interview.
Mr. Gerard said he supported Speaker Clark but was quite reconciled to his provisional defeat in 1912, or other words to that effect.

The trial of Prof. Charles E. Vawter, charged with murdering Stockton Heth, Jr., is in progress at Christiansburg, Va., with the defense resting on "pleas of the 'unwritten law'" and self-defense. Prospects were that both Mr. and Mrs. Vawter will be called to the stand.

Germany, in new terms it is said,
will propose to surrender her conquests in the East and West, on condition of retaining her Balkan ways to Bagdad and Mesopotamia, but the Allies are more united against that plan than any other proposal. Prospects of a separate peace by any Teutonic countries are wholly discounted.

Lens, St. Quentin and Laon—these are the three pivotal points in France.
If the French and English capture these three places, or any two of them, the whole German line must go back. We read of many villages, woods and plateaus being taken, but so long as the Germans keep Lens, St. Quentin and Laon their new line will hold.

Secretary Lane is a pessimist in war matters. He told the governors con-fering with the council of national defense on the part state governments will take in the war, that the federal government had heard 400,000 tons of shipping had been sunk in the last week by German submarines. The destruction, Secretary Lane said, was not only threatening the existence of England and France, but was alarming the United States. Study of inventions to combat the submarine menace is being diligently pursued in the interior department. The United States must build ships as rapidly as possible. "If we don't fight the war on the other side," he said, "we shall have to fight it on this side of the Atlantic."

DISCHARGING BETTY

By ISABEL FROST.

Curzon had definitely, positively made up his mind to discharge Betty.
If discipline was to be maintained in the office at all, that was the first step toward it. In the first place, she never should have been employed in such a place as the Benzinger Iron works. She had walked through the outer gates one early spring morning, the last of a line of applicants, and had asked the first worker she met what the superintendent's name was.

"Frank Curzon," she was told. Therefore, instead of waiting her turn, Betty had marched valiantly up to the bookkeeper's desk and had asked for Mr.
Curzon quite as if she were paying a little afternoon call. And she got the position.

The salary was only $9 a week, but there was no carfare to pay, and the factory lay just across the railroad tracks from the pretty suburban neighborhood where she lived with her father and the four boys, all younger than herself.

"You mustn't mind," she said that evening, beaming on her docile home circle at the supper table. "I'm a terrible cook, and this way I can hire old Mrs. Ransom to come in and work for us by the day for $4 a week. That leaves me five for myself. I am Mr.
Curzon's private secretary."

"What does he look like?" demanded
David, the eldest brother.

"Well, he's rather tall, and possibly thirty, more or less." Betty dished the preserved cherries thoughtfully. "And very, very businesslike and short-spoken."

"But," said Dave sarcastically, "wait till he's Bettified."

It took about four weeks to Bettify
the whole office. It began with the strike at the gray iron foundry across the street. After the reserves had been called out and the fight in the yards was over, Curzon came back, looking rather tense and angry.

"Why didn't you keep out of range
when those fellows were firing at us?"
he demanded of Betty.

"I wanted to see," answered Betty haughtily. "It was very interesting."

It was the end of the second month that Curzon began to make up his mind. In the first place, he was ambitious and had put all thoughts of love or marriage out of his scheme of life. The foundry was his life. And still it was June, and Betty wore the most entrancing, fluffy gowns to work, absolutely unbusinesslike.

Likewise, at the lunch hour, Betty had a tiny electric contrivance which she calmly applied to the company's switch, and on which she managed somehow to concoct the daintiest and most unexpected of luncheon dishes, since there was no good restaurant in a radius of a mile. And then she would invite him to partake.

So one night toward the end of June,
when she had worked overtime, he stood by the window of the office that overlooked the gray iron building and spoke gloomily, fatalistically.

"Of course, you know this can't go on much longer."

"Are you trying to discharge me, Mr.
Curzon?"

"I've got to," answered Curzon slowly, returning her look with unswerving intention. "I've either got to fire you or marry you. This can't go on I can't think of anything under the light of heaven but you, day or night,
and I want to work."

"Then, of course, I must leave," said Betty, with her very nicest, her very kindest manner.

"Betty," said Curzon, in a curious voice, a voice of accusation and appeal, too. "Betty, why did you ever come to work here? I didn't want you.
You know perfectly well you've seen this coming on, and I believe you've gloated over it."

Nobody knows how far Betty's dignity would have gone if it had not been for the half-brick that came sailing through the open window. Curzon went down like a hewn tree at her feet. When the ambulance arrived Jim and the engineer were holding down the two strikers who had lain in wait outside the office windows for a chance at the boss.

But inside the office Betty knelt on the floor beside Curzon. She had washed and bandaged the cut on his brow and had pillowed his head on her coat—the little pongee silk coat she wore to work. And the young surgeon, entering hastily, hesitated on the threshold, for Betty's hand was stroking back the hair from the patient's forehead with more than a nurse's touch, and the upward gaze of his eyes was—as he told Jim later—"a dead give-away."

"I'm not going to work at the foundry any longer," Betty broke the news to the family circle that night with tact and gentleness.

"Thought it wouldn't last much longer," scoffed Dave. "Who discharged
you, Betty?"

"Mr. Curzon," sweetly.

"For carrying on in business hours," Archie hinted darkly. Just then the bell rang at the front door, and the color deepened in Betty's cheeks as she rose.

"That's Mr. Curzon, and you behave every last one of you. He's come to see father."

"Are you going to scold him for firing you, Betty?" whispered Dave, eagerly.

And Betty turned at the door to whisper back with joy:

"No, I'm going to marry him, goose."

Lady.

Trenton, Ga.—Mrs. Ellie Gifford, of this place, writes: "I have always suffered . . . but was worse after marriage.
I would have . . . pains and misery in my stomach and hips. I would have a bad sick headache every time, which would generally last two days. I had always heard what a good medicine Cardui was, so I thought I would try it. I used two bottles and it helped me."

Fifteen months later I began to be nervous and was worse at my . . . But at these times I did not have any pain and do not now suffer any pain. But I was very nervous, so nervous that my hands would shake. Any noise would make me jump. So I took two more bottles of Cardui. I have never been nervous since . . . and do not have any pain.
I think this is all due to Cardui and Black-Draught."

Cardui, the woman's tonic, is composed only of pure, vegetable ingredients, which have been recognized for many years by standard medical books, as of medicinal value, in the treatment of many diseases peculiar to women. Try Cardui.

Product of the Bee Utilized.

Of course the great use for honey in old English days was to make mead and metheglin. Pliny said mead had all the bad qualities of wine and none of the good ones. Mead was made both in the north and south of Europe, but in the south the grape was more popular, while in the north the product of the bee reigned supreme. Mead was the Saxon drink; but the Normans brought the grape wine from France with them, and it became a potent rival.

BURGLAR ALARM USES PHONE

Ingenious Device Automatically Summons Help When Bank Cashiers
Are Attacked.

Hereafter armed robbers that enter a bank and "cover" the cashiers with revolvers, preparatory to gathering up the money, may find that they are not as secure from attack as the submissive men in front of them would indicate, for the bank may be protected with a recently devised secret signal system that automatically telephones for help in such an emergency. This protective system is described in Popular Mechanics.

To operate the alarms one has only to press a hidden electric button with his foot or knee. All the apparatus, save the button, is located in another room, or in a cabinet, out of hearing of the bandits. Pressing the button causes a lifting device to raise the receiver hook of a telephone, by means of a cord, thus making connection with central. Simultaneously a small-size phonograph, situated in front of the telephone transmitter, begins to operate, repeating again and again some such message as this: "Help! Robbers! Send police to Third National bank!" The telephone girl, on hearing this appeal, will immediately notify the police. An obvious advantage of this system is that the robbers are wholly unaware that any alarm has been turned in and so their capture is much more probable.

HORSE MEAT SEEN AS DIET

Patrons of New York Boarding Houses Fear That They May Soon Be Confronted With New Menu.

Conversation in New York's most select boarding house circles these days runs to horses with a speed that threatens to overthrow the best equipped sausage stables on the East side, the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch writes. Although the East side has been eating meat for some time, none of the landladies in the prune belt have dared as yet to put such dishes as selling plater soup, also ran salad, trotter kidney en suley, steeplechase stew or puree of pony on their menu cards, but they threaten to do so unless the present prices of meat are soon reduced.

Horse dealers, however, have eased the minds of the veteran and dyspeptic boarders. They declare that as long as the war in Europe permits such a demand as now exists for American horses there is little danger of horse meat playing an important part in the reduction of the living cost. At least $135 can be obtained now for almost any sort of horse carrying enough flesh to make him a profitable investment. Cattle for dressing, butchers declared, can be bought now for $110 to $120. They estimated that a horse equipped with enough flesh to make him available for food purposes in first-class eating places could not be purchased for less than $150 or $160.

Bolivia is the Thibet of South America. It is the highest inhabited country in the western hemisphere. Although only ten degrees from the equator, Bolivia is colder than Maine. It's a roomy country. You could put 60 Belgians into Bolivia, and yet this great land has only one-third of Belgium's population. Foreigners and foreign capital are now pouring into Bolivia, and her immense stores of that exceedingly precious metal, tin, promise much for the future.—Dan Ward, in World Outlook.

GRAFTING A RABBIT'S SPINE.

Dr. A. W. Mayo-Robson reports to the British Medical Journal the successful use of a piece cut from a rabbit's spinal cord as a graft between the cut ends of the median nerve in a man's arm, from which two and a half inches had been removed. He also grafted a bit of the rabbit's sciatic nerve to fill a gap in the ulnar nerve. The paralysis, for which the operation had been performed, gradually disappeared and in six years the muscles of the lower arm and hand were performing their duties normally.

Whenever anything we have been thinking of buying is really marked down in price, the announcement is accompanied by the depressing information that this sale is strictly cash.—Ohio State Journal.

THE KENTUCKIAN FOR 1917

EVER since the year 1868, the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN has been published under one name or another. In 1879 the present name was given and the present management took charge of the paper, which is now in its 39th volume. For almost 40 years it has been a faithful exponent of the growth and development of the city and county. It has written in its files a history of the county covering that long period. It has recorded the birth of three generations in some instances. It has seen the small town develop into a prosperous city with its people ever looking forward to greater things.

During all these years it has had a loyal and constant patronage from the best people of the county. It has many subscribers whose names have not been off its subscription lists in 39 years. In many other families sons have taken their father's places. We would be ungrateful not to appreciate support like this, but we have never come to the reading public with a stronger appeal for patronage than this year. Conditions have greatly changed and paper stock is three times as high as a year ago.

Many newspapers have advanced rates but in order that the circulation may not be lessened by a higher price the KENTUCKIAN will still be sent for $2.00 a year, the old price. It will be necessary though to adhere rigidly to the cash system, since more than $1.00 must be paid in advance for the paper upon which we print 156 papers and the cost of printing leaves but little profit out of the second dollar. We are asking our old subscribers to stand by us in this crisis by renewing promptly.

All papers not paid for will be Stopped.
Don't Let Yours Stop.

The Price Will be the same $2.00 a Year
as heretofore,

INCREASE ACREAGE OF SWEET POTATOES

Cost Less to Plant—Produce More Food to Acre than Irish Potatoes.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—Seed to plant an acre of Irish potatoes cost about $40 this spring. Seed sweet potatoes will not cost more than $4 per acre where vine cuttings taken from early-set plants are used. The yield of sweet potatoes per acre is usually greater than that of Irish potatoes, and as a food they are as nutritious. Sweet potatoes may be grown throughout the States and, of course, in certain other sections. Specialists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture are urging an increased acreage of this crop wherever it can be easily grown.

Sweet potatoes, it is pointed out, are the South's chief instrument for a quick and effective increase of the food supply. Seed is plentiful. Last year's crop was the second largest ever produced. By means of vine cutting it is possible to plant almost unlimited areas of this crop and at the same time conserve the present supply. That is, a farmer who wishes to plant ten acres will need seed enough, say eight to ten bushels, to get slips for one acre. Vine cuttings from this acre would plant many more acres, plantings being possible until the first of August in the lower South. This system, now extensively used in the South, enables the utilization of land from which early potatoes, cabbage and other truck crops have been taken.

Sweet potatoes are not expensive to grow. The main limiting factor to production of vast quantities by this plan is labor. Yields from fields set with vine cuttings are as large as from plants grown from slips. This method has the further advantage of preventing the transfer of diseases which are carried on the tubers.

The South doesn't need to learn how to grow sweet potatoes, the specialists point out. Farmers know how to produce large yields of this crop. But the farmer must be impressed with the necessity of increasing his acreage of this crop, and then, when harvest comes, to prevent the enormous loss from improper handling and storing. The best way to keep sweet potatoes is to store them in well-ventilated storage houses, not "dug-outs." Storage houses should be made ready as soon as possible. In Farmers' Bulletin 548, "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," instructions for building such houses and for converting old and unoccupied buildings are given.

RED CROSS BOXES.

Young Ladies In Charge Of Them On Streets
Yesterday.

Hopkinsville is doing her part in contributing to the Red Cross work. Yesterday at every corner in the downtown section there were several of the city's most attractive young ladies, dressed in full Red Cross equipment, soliciting contributions for the worthy cause. They were very successful, for few could pass coldly by and refuse to give something when they were halted by a beautiful young lady who smiled into their faces and held out a box for them to drop something into.

At his morning men's meeting Evangelist Fife gave a stirring talk in behalf of the Red Cross and urged his hearers to contribute liberally. There was a young lady at the door and as the men left the meeting they had to run the gauntlet and most of them made some kind of a contribution.

Baptist Church.

Sunday School at 9:30 and it will be rally day. All members are urged to be on hand and bring some friend. Visitors cordially welcomed. Usual services at 11 a. m. and 7:20 a. m. by the pastor, Dr. C. M. Thompson. His theme at night will be "Some Lessons Already Learned From the European War."

Helpfulness.

You cannot help any one very much unless you can inspire him with the ambition to help himself, and that is why a good example is worth more than any other kind of assistance. Make right-doing so attractive in your own life that it will inspire the onlookers to do right.

Made Her Well.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."—Mrs. JENNIE MOYER, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacements, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, backache, or bearing-down pains, need the tonic properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

FIFE MEETING.

Sermon On "Amusements"
And "Where Cain Got
His Wife."

Wednesday night Evangelist Clyde Lee Fife preached on "Amusements" to one of the largest crowds ever assembled at the tabernacle. He used many vivid illustrations to make telling points and caused thunderous applause by his imitation of an old-time country picnic and dance, illustrating it by tuning his "fiddle" in the old-time way, playing an old fashioned tune called the "Chicken Reel," and then throwing down the "fiddle" he gave an imitation of the modern dance steps that are common to most ball rooms. He took his way of backing up his argument that the dance is becoming increasingly hurtful.

He hit hard blows at the saloon and the card players and spoke vehemently against the life led by the actor.

Thursday night he spoke on the "Branded Man," or "Where Cain got his Wife." He said that every woman whose husband was a drunkard and a murderer or any kind of a moral leper was a wife of Cain's for she was forced to bear the burden of a life with a branded man. The theme of the sermon was that no man could live unto himself, but that he must share his virtue and his sin with all mankind.

Services today and tomorrow will be held at the usual hours.

Of what shall a man be proud if he is not proud of his friends?—Steven-son.

MORE SOUR CREAM DISHES.

The number of ways of serving sour cream as food has not yet been written. The following are a few:

Quick Cream Cookies.—Take a cupful of sour cream, one cupful of sugar, one egg, two and a half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, and salt, flavoring to taste. Drop by spoonfuls on well-greased pans; pat out and sprinkle with sugar; add a half a nut meat and bake in a quick oven.

Hermits.—Take a cupful of thick sour cream, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped raisins, two-thirds of a cupful of butter, two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg with flour to make a stiff dough as can be stirred. Drop by spoonfuls on a well-greased pan, leaving plenty of room for them to spread. A raisin or nut may be added to each to improve its appearance.

Deviled Eggs.—Cook six eggs hard, cut in halves lengthwise, remove the yolks and mash with a fork, adding enough thick, sour cream to moisten; add mustard, salt and a little red pepper. If cream is too sweet add dash of lemon juice and put back into the whites.

Sour Cream Pie.—One cupful of sour cream, two-thirds of a cupful of sweet milk, one-half cupful of chopped raisins, one and a half tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, the yolks of two eggs and a little salt. Bake in one crust and use the whites of the eggs for a meringue.

Graham Biscuits.—Take a tablespoonful of sweet and one cupful of sour milk, one cupful of graham flour, one egg, one teaspoonful each of soda and salt. Mix well and bake in well-greased hot gem pans.

Sweet Potato Pie.—Take a cupful of sour cream, one cupful sugar, one pint of mashed sweet potato, the yolk of four eggs, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half a nutmeg, salt, all well mixed together. Bake in one crust and spread with strained honey while hot. Or a meringue may be placed over the top if preferred.

Fire in the business district at Glasgow, destroyed several buildings, doing damage estimated at $50,000.

John C. Powers, of Hawesville, Ky., was shot and fatally wounded Saturday evening at Cannelton, Ind., by Ellen Dowell, a former sweetheart of Powers.

The Greenwood Tree.
The greenwood tree of English song and story is now said to have been the holly, which retains its bright dress the year round and is supposed to have stood Robin Hood and other outlaws in good stead, when, clad in Lincoln green, they sought its shelter, depending on the law of protective coloration to escape the laws of Nottingham town and other troublesomely inquisitive municipalities.

The Cure

"There goes as mean a man as ever walked," remarked Giles Bigelow, as he glanced out of the window of the little shop.

Andrew Pike, the shoemaker, was not curious enough to look up from his work; but he did stare in astonishment when old Moses Rice, whose meekness was proverbial, rebuked the speaker.

"Giles," the old gentleman began, "I don't suppose you've got a thing against Deacon Tarbox. It's just your way of flinging out about folks, no matter who they be."

"You are getting to be a regular backbiter, Giles," Uncle Moses went on, in a voice tremulous with earnestness. "If you must talk about folks, why can't you think of something to say in their favor? It would be just as easy, and it would leave a better taste in your mouth."

Giles Bigelow had been so completely taken by surprise that he was not ready with his defense until after the door had closed behind Uncle Moses.

Giles took his departure, much offended, and Webster Haines was left as the only remaining visitor at the shop.

"Well," said Webster, as he slid into a still easier position in his chair, "Uncle Moses spoke quite a piece, for him. But it didn't make a particle of impression. I'd like to see someone give Giles a lesson that he would remember. Look here, Andrew, you heard Giles say that he never says anything about a man that he wouldn't be willing to have him hear. Now Josh Flood and George Glover and Sam Nowell and I are coming here tonight to play checkers."

"I'll get them to come early, and we'll crowd into this little cubbyhole that you've got curtained off here, and be there when Giles comes for his boots. You give him a chance to air his honest opinion of us four. Just mention our names, incidentally, and he'll do the rest. Then when he has finished we'll step forth and have our innings."

Webster Haines had no difficulty in interesting his friends, and the four were hidden behind the dingy curtain in the shop when Giles Bigelow came in that evening.

"Almost finished, Giles," said the shoemaker briskly. "Sit down a minute. Plenty of room tonight, for a wonder. Josh Flood was here a few minutes ago, though," he added casually.

"Josh Flood," said Giles, as he sank into a chair, "is a clever, well-meaning chap, when all is said and done. He wouldn't harm a mosquito."

Andrew waited for further comment; none being forthcoming, he said, "George Glover is generally round where Josh is."

"George Glover is about as strong a man in his arms as I know of," said Giles. "I don't see why he couldn't do considerable of a day's work if he should take a notion to."

Again Andrew waited. "I was sort of expecting Sam Nowell tonight," he said at length.

"Sam Nowell is as good a judge of a horse as there is in town, according to my way of thinking," remarked Giles, and with that he stopped.

By this time the shoemaker was having some difficulty in controlling his countenance, but he persevered. "Seen anything of Web Haines since he was in here this afternoon?" he asked.

"No, I haven't," answered Giles. There was an appreciable pause before he cleared his throat and continued, "Web Haines' wife is as smart as they make 'em. How he ever brought it about, I don't know, but it speaks well for Web that he had gimp enough to get her to have him."

"There, your boots are done, Giles," said Andrew. "It will be a dollar. I must get to work on Uncle Moses' job."

Giles' face brightened. "Now, there's a man for ye—Moses Rice! Goes right along, minding his own business, and scarce ever says a word, but when he does speak he's worth listening to. You heard what he said to me this afternoon. Well, I've been chewing it over and I've come to the conclusion that he was right. I'm going to try to say a good word for every namable person that is mentioned in my presence, but I must say that I don't see how I could have had a much harder test than those names that you happened to mention just now. Except, of course, Moses Rice; he's the salt of the earth. I snub, when you spoke of Web Haines, I thought for a minute I was stumped! But I did it, and it all goes to show what a man can accomplish when he sets out. A dollar, did you say? I was in hopes you'd make it 90 cents."

When Giles had gone, the listeners emerged from their cramped quarters.

"Giles didn't need your treatment, after all," said the shoemaker dryly. "Uncle Moses did all that was necessary."

"Well, I don't know," replied Webster Haines, with a wry smile. "It kinder looked to me as if Giles wasn't more than half cured."—Youth's Companion.

MUTTON OUR GOOD MEAT.

Mutton is not served as often as it should be because many do not like the flavor. Before our butchers learned that the carcass of a sheep should not be handled after the wool had covered the hands with its oil, much of the mutton was ruined as to flavor.

If care is used in the preparation of the meat before it reaches the cook and she removes all of the skin, there will be no woolly flavor left to disturb the most fastidious. Mutton being a short-fibered meat, is more easily digested than beef or pork.

Mutton in Casserole.—Cut mutton into serving-sized pieces, roll in seasoned flour with a bit of chopped onion and fry brown in a small amount of hot fat. Then add a pint or more of finely shredded carrots, with enough water to cook them, leaving just enough for the gravy. The flour will furnish the thickening. Cook slowly well covered for two or three hours, or until the meat and vegetables are tender. A small serving of meat with plenty of the carrots which are well flavored with the meat juices will make a good meal. This dish may be prepared in an ordinary iron frying pan, cooking the meat and vegetables on the back part of the stove at the simmering temperature.

Take a shoulder of mutton, remove the bone and, fill with stuffing, using any desired forcemeat; baste frequently while roasting.

Mutton With Dumplings.—Take three pounds of the breast, simmer until tender, then set aside to cool; skim off all the fat, return the mutton to the liquid, add one or two onions finely chopped, salt, pepper and a little curry powder if liked. Just before ready to serve, drop dumplings into the boiling hot kettle; small ones cook in eight minutes. Serve with the dumplings surrounding the platter of meat. Mutton chops are delicious when well cooked and seasoned. Mutton may be served rare, lamb never. A few peas to a mutton stew adds to the flavor and gives variety.

COLOSSUS IN COPPER FIELD

Man Who Doubled World's Output in Few Years Is Only 47 Today and Is a Multimillionaire.

The story of Daniel C. Jackling, who has doubled the world's copper output and is a giant in the copper field today, is told in the American Magazine. He has worked so swiftly and so quietly that the public as yet is not aware of his magnitude.

At thirty-five he was vice president and general manager of a struggling mining company, predestined, according to the unanimous verdict of expert opinion, to be a speedy, very complete and costly failure. This is not ancient history. The mine was opened, the company organized, only 12 years ago.

At forty he was a millionaire. At forty-five he rounded the Horn in his own steam yacht. He is forty-seven today and a multimillionaire. He controls the operation of four mines, all less than 12 years old, which annually produce twice as much copper as the famous mines of Michigan put together. He acquired an unprofitable zinc property four years ago, lifted its output until the figures approached the total zinc production of all the mines in Missouri, and made it pay $15,000,000 in dividends during the last two years.

USE OF RUBBER GROWS.

Consumption of rubber per capita is more than twice what it was 25 years ago. One company expects to manufacture uppers of shoes from rubber as well as soles. This company will operate its own merchant marine to bring crude rubber from Sumatra and carry manufactured articles to all parts of the world. The company now employs 28,621 men and manufactures 218,930 pairs of rubber shoes a day. More than 1,000,000 trees on Sumatra plantations are being tapped.

"Of course I do. Aren't the other fellows getting it all the time?"

"Do their lives blend well?"

GEN. WOOD STUDIED KORAN

Found It to Advantage in His Post as Governor of the Savage Moro Province in Philippines.

At one time General Wood had the most hazardous post in the Philippines, that of commander of the department of Mindanao and governor of the Moro province, fiercest of the island bailiwicks. "More than once," writes Isaac F. Marcossan, whose personality study, "Leonard Wood—American" appears in Everybody's, "he blocked savage cunning with his knowledge and foresight, as in the following instance:

"On one occasion he received a delegation of Mohammedan polygamists who had come to plead for their harems and justify slaveholding at the same time. The sultan of Jolo, who sat cross-legged on his rug, spoke up:

"The prophet has said that a man may have many wives. It is so ordained in the Koran."

"That is quite true," replied General Wood. "I have read it there myself." All the Mohammedans looked up with pleasure and satisfaction.

"But," continued the general, "the prophet also says that 'a wise man will be content with one.'"

"There was nothing more to be said, and the Moros left, stunned into silence and obedience by what they believed to be the uncanny wizardry of the Big White Chief who was as wise as he was brave."

IT COSTS TO BE EXCLUSIVE

Carnegie and Other Millionaires Pay High for Adjacent Property in Order to Protect Their Homes.

Possessing a mansion in the metropolis apparently is not without its troubles, observes the New York Globe. Recently Andrew Carnegie paid $1,750,000 for the privilege of deciding who shall be his neighbors to the south. A few years ago Mr. Carnegie similarly protected himself to the north, where a select colony of homes has since been established.

In the case of Mr. Carnegie these seemingly wasted millions work a double purpose. In addition to preventing undesirable construction they become very profitable investments, as the land is turned over piece by piece to persons who will pay handsomely for the privilege of joining a millionaire's home colony.

Commodore Arthur Curtiss James conducted a similar protective buying movement on Park avenue. He bought up all available lands adjacent to his million-dollar residence at Sixty-ninth street.

SPADING BY MACHINERY.

One objection to starting the backyard vegetable garden has been overcome by the invention of a small motor-power spading machine. The contrivance is designed for use on farms too small for the lightest tractors. It is mounted on a truck body and controlled by plow handles. Two spading forks driven by a piston, operate alternately. Main springs are connected to the shanks of the spading tools below their pivots. Counter-balancing springs are connected above the pivots. This arrangement permits the spades to yield individually either forward or backward when a rock is encountered.

The cost of operating such a machine should not be as great as the expense of feeding a horse. Its use would remove some of the closeness of contact with the earth that the amateur gardener likes to talk about, but it would also probably result in the completion of more backyard gardens after they have been started.—Indianapolis News.

STEER RETARDED IN GROWTH

Stunting an Animal as Result of Insufficient Food May Be Only Temporary Condition.

Live stock products are the result of growth. By far the largest part of increase in animals is the result of growth. The younger the animals the greater the growth impulse. Many factors influence the tendency of an animal to grow. Among these are age, condition, gestation, lactation and the quantity and quality of food. A given amount of food will produce more growth on a young animal than on the same animal at a later age. All the growth factors influence the young animal much more powerfully than older animals.

If an animal's food supply is insufficient for normal growth, the animal may be retarded in growth. If this treatment is continued for a long time the animal may become permanently stunted.

Stunting an animal as the result of insufficient food may be only a temporary condition. An animal does not lose its capacity to grow as the result of stunting. F. B. Mumford, dean of the Missouri College of Agriculture, cites a feeding test at the Missouri experiment station in which an animal that had been stunted by poor feeding to such an extent that it weighed only 200 pounds at twelve months of age, gained 841 pounds during the second year. Only 5.6 pounds of grain were required on this steer stunted during the first twelve months. A steer that had been generously fed during the first twelve months of his life gained only 500 pounds during the second twelve months, and this gain was more expensive than the gain made on the stunted steer. The amount of grain required to make a pound of gain on the well-fed steer was 9.8 pounds.

It is certain that stunting an animal even for so long a period as twelve months does not destroy its capacity to grow.

GAINS MADE FEEDING LAMBS

Result of Test at South Dakota Station to Determine Value of Alfalfa and Prairie Hay.

The best gains ever secured at the South Dakota experiment station in feeding lambs was in an experiment to determine the comparative value of alfalfa and prairie hay with the same kind of a grain ration.

The grain ration consisted of a mixture of 100 pounds of oats, 100 pounds of shelled corn and 25 pounds of oil meal.

Each lot was started on one pound per head of the mixture daily, and increased until they were receiving two and one-tenths pounds per head of grain daily, and what hay they would eat.

The average daily gain per head for the lot that received the alfalfa hay was .51 of a pound, while with the lot that received the prairie hay, the average daily gain per head was .38 of a pound.

DAILY EXERCISE FOR STOCK

Horses and Mules Should Be Given Run for an Hour or So in Lot Adjoining Stables.

Horses and mules should have good daily carding and regular exercise. If there is nothing for them to do remove their shoes and give them a run for an hour or so in a well-fenced lot adjoining the stables.

The best and safest fence for pasture is of stout woven wire, rail or a combination board and smooth wire. Barbed wire should not be used, as it is dangerous.

SUNLIGHT IS BIG ESSENTIAL

Provision for Admission of Maximum Amount of Light in Barn Should Not Be Overlooked.

No barns or shelters for any kind of animals should ever be constructed without making ample provision for the admission of the maximum amount of sunlight. Such buildings should have a southern exposure, if possible. This will provide extra warmth in the winter time and the sunlight which is thus permitted to enter the building will destroy many disease germs.

WRITES OF JOYS OF PICNIC

One Man Seems to Have the Right Idea of What Outdoor Entertainment Should Be.

I am partial to picnics—the spreading of the cloth in the woods or beside a stream—although I am not avid for sandwiches unless hunger presses me, writes Charles S. Brooks in the Yale Review. Rather, let there be a skillet in the company and let a fire be started. Nor need a picnic consume the day. In summer it requires but the late afternoon, with such borrowing of the night as is necessary for the journey home. You leave the street car, clanking with your bundles like an itinerant tinnerman. You follow a stream which on these lower stretches, it is sad to say, is already infected with the vices of the city. Like many a countryman who has come to town, it has fallen to dissipation. It shows the marks of the bottle. Farther up, its course is cleaner. You cross it in the mud. Was it not Christian who fell into the bog because of the burden on his back? Then you climb a villainously long hill and pop out upon an open platform above the city.

The height commands a prospect to the west. Below is the smoke of a thousand suppers. Up from the city there comes the hum of life, now somewhat fallen with the traffic of the day—as though nature already practiced the tune for sending later her creatures off to sleep. You light a fire. The baskets disgorge their secrets. Ants and other leviathans think eventually that a circus has come or that bears are in the town. The chops and bacon achieve their appointed destiny. You throw the last bone across your shoulder. It slips and rattles to the river. The sun sets. Night like an ancient dame puts on her jewels.

Unique Among Magazines

Probably Joe Mitchell Chapple knows personally more famous people than any other man in the world.

OTHER magazines have their place in fiction, but the National with Joe Chapple's helm is different. Every month for twenty years has made a trip to Washington to obtain material for his "Affairs at Washington" department. You can hear him 12 times a year through the pages of The National Magazine and enjoy the many timely, interesting talks and special articles on the big men and affairs of the day. The National follows no rut. It is the true life of the magazine world. It takes you over wide stretches of territory. It sets you down suddenly face to face with a big fact. It keeps close to human impulses. People usually like it. It "boasts" life at every angle. It is not a palliative, but a blood and iron tonic to every person—man, woman, child. No matter where you live, the National will do you good. Write today for a copy and send no money until you have read the magazine and know you like it. For $1.00, every four months, you can become a regular subscriber to the National Magazine. NATIONAL MAGAZINE, Boston, Mass. Publishers "Heart Throbs" and "Heart Songs."

Removing Old Paint.

Old paint may be quickly and easily removed from any surface by scrubbing with the following mixture: Dissolve a quart of baking soda in a gallon of water and add a quart of quick lime. Apply to the surface with a brush and in a few minutes all traces of the old paint may be washed off in warm water. The wood should then be washed with vinegar before new paint is applied to remove all the alkali.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY MAY 6

Special Efforts to Be Put Forth to Break All Former Records.

Tomorrow, May 6, has been designated as Go-to-Sunday School-day for the State of Kentucky, and all people are urged to be present in some Sunday School on that day.

Last year Hopkinsville broke all former records for attendance on Sunday May 7th with an attendance that far exceeded that of previous years. Plans are on foot now for the record to be higher than ever before on this Go-to-Sunday School Day.

Special preparation will be made by the teachers and officers to take care of an increased number on that day, and go out and bring in those who are not now attending one of the Sunday schools.

ORATORICAL CONTEST

Paducah Scene of Greatest Meet in History of Association.

Yesterday Paducah was the Mecca of all those who are interested in High School activities. Hundreds of students and patrons of the different High Schools of West Kentucky made the trip to Paducah to attend the annual West Kentucky Oratorical contest. A large crowd, headed by Prof. G. C. Koffman, of the local High School, went to cheer our contestants on to victory. H. H. S. was represented by Miss Flora Rawls and Mr. John Hanbery, and their supporters left with high hopes of winning both the boys' and the girls' contests.

The contest was held at the Ky. Theatre, and as far as is known the schools were represented as follows: Madisonville by Mr. Parish; Princeton by Harry Long; Dawson Springs by Earl Nichols; Paducah by Hazard Gardner. The representatives of Henderson and Owensboro at this time are not known. The judges on thought and composition were Chas. Weaver, of Kentucky University; Dr. Edwin P. Mins, of Vanderbilt, and Prof. L. L. Patterson, of Mississippi A. & M. On delivery the judges were Prof. W. E. Farrer, of Bethel College, Russellville; Prof. R. P. Green, of State Normal, Bowling Green, and Prof. L. T. Dickey, of the Bowling Green Business College. The speakers were introduced by Joseph Becker Phillips, of Paducah High School, Class President.

Friday afternoon was the greatest day for athletics ever seen in Western Kentucky. Paducah High had arranged an arena exhibition which would have compensated the visitors for their trip even if the Oratorical had been eliminated. The afternoon started with an all-round track and field meet, in which seven West Kentucky High Schools took part, and the cream of high school athletes in this end of the State were seen in action. The meet started at 10 o'clock at Wilhelm Field and every high school represented had its share of victories. After the meet the local High School baseball team and that of Paducah High engaged in a game of ball. As a whole, this was the most successful oratorical contest held in recent years. Results will be given Tuesday.

A Booster Abroad.

The International Harvester company, in Evansville, by the local general agent, J. F. Allensworth, has offered to plow free of charge any vacant lots, provided they are not smaller than 50 by 150 feet and not larger than a half acre, and also provided that there are no stumps on the land and the rubbish is removed. This is a move to encourage gardening among the people who cannot get their gardens plowed. Mr. Allensworth is a Christian county man, a brother of attorney Jas. B. Allensworth.

Sits Up Anassisted

New York, May 1.—Madame Sarah Bernhardt was able to sit up unassisted today for the first time since she became ill in this city and was compelled to undergo an operation. Her physicians at Mt. Sinai Hospital issued a bulletin tonight in which it was said the strength she now displays "makes the outlook more favorable."

TORE IT OUT IN A FORD

Winding up in a Ditch And Was Fined $52.50 In Court.

R. C. Whittinghill, a young man from Madisonville, was fined $52.50 for speeding in an automobile, in the police court Thursday morning. He was accompanied by young Mr. Givens, who did not know how to operate the car and said he vigorously protested but Whittinghill would not slow down.

The car was a new Ford roadster and it left town at a high rate of speed, almost jumping over the North Main street bridge, and finally was ditched two miles out of town. The occupants escaped injury and the car was not hurt much. The police pursued in E. G. Peterson's car, who was near the court house, and brought Whittinghill and his friend back to town. On the way out the car knocked down several mail boxes and created wild excitement. Whittinghill was allowed to go out and finance his "fun," which he soon did and the account was squared. Mr. Givens was not put under arrest.

Within His Rights

Maysville, Ky., May 3.—The indictment against J. Quincy Ward, executive agent of the fish and game commission, charging him with seining in the Ohio River, was dismissed today by Judge Newell on the ground that under the statute the executive agent had the authority and it was his duty to capture fish for the purpose of stocking the waters of the State. Many people here were interested in the outcome.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for clerk, for both men and women, on May 25, 1917, at Hopkinsville, as well as at many other places over the United States. SHORTAGE OF IMPLEMENTS

Manufacturers Have Practically No Stock on Hand. It is Declared.

Chicago, May 4.—Members of the special committee appointed by the National Implement and Vehicle Association to co-operate with the Federal Government in the movement to increase this country's food production met here today and issued a statement calling attention to the fact that the success of the campaign will be seriously jeopardized because of a shortage of farm implements due to the inability of implement manufacturers to obtain but 75 per cent. of the sheet steel needed to supply the normal demand of the farmers.

Attention is called to the fact that the farm implement manufacturers have practically no stock on hand and that thousands of farmers in recent years have allowed their equipment to deteriorate to such an extent that many implements cannot be used this year without repairs.

She enrolled five members, we are glad to say, and wish there had been several more.

PLACED 12,000 WYANDOTTE EGGS

Messrs. McKenzie and Brooks Close The County Campaign.

County Agent Jas. A. McKenzie and his assistant, P. B. Brooks, have virtually wound up their egg campaign, after placing about 12,000 White Wyandotte eggs in the county. They were ordered from many dealers in different States, the local supply being entirely inadequate. The eggs in the aggregate cost about $700. Good hatches have been reported and soon there will be something like 10,000 young chicks in the county, besides those raised by the last club members who got their starts last year. They can still supply eggs from local dealers.
